Description

RUSSIA/UKRAINE: According to the head of the Russian Armed Forces' Nuclear, Biological, and Chemical Protection Troops, the laboratories in Lvov were conducting work with infectious agents of plague, anthrax, and brucellosis, while the labs in Kharkov and Poltava were working with infectious agents of diphtheria, salmonellosis, and dysentery.

A network comprised of some 30 biological laboratories was formed in Ukraine, with the activities conducted in these labs being commissioned by the US Ministry of Defense, Russia's Defense Ministry has announced.

Lt. Gen. Igor Kirillov, head of the Russian Armed Forces' Nuclear, Biological, and Chemical Protection Troops, stated that the biolabs' activities, as well as the "so called reform program of Ukraine's healthcare system executed by the US" have led to an increase in cases of "highly dangerous and economically significant infections."

According to Kirillov, biological laboratories in Lvov were conducting work with infectious agents of plague, anthrax, and brucellosis, while the labs in Kharkov and Poltava were working with infectious agents of diphtheria, salmonellosis, and dysentery.

Kirillov also declared that the government in Kiev had sent to the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in the United States thousands of patient's serum samples, primarily from patients of "Slavic ethnicity," under the pretext of testing COVID-19 treatment methods.
