

America Is Under Attack By These 469 MSM ‘Journalists’ Funded By George Soros

Description

Notorious globalist billionaire George Soros has gone on the record declaring himself a God and promising an audience at the World Economic Forum that the New World Order are making the necessary preparations to completely and utterly obliterate the conservative agenda in the US.

Soros is playing his part in this destructive agenda the only way he knows how — by throwing his dirty money around, sponsoring hate groups, paid protestors, and NGOs, attempting to subvert the course of democracy and eradicate the silent majority.

Soros has also been paying dozens of “journalists” and other corporate media figures large sums of cash to promote his radical agenda — and now we know their names.

In return for their souls, Soros is paying these so-called “journalists” anywhere from $63,000 to $85,000 to promote his agenda to the masses and publish glowing reports on his radical leftist activities.

Much of the propaganda effort has sought to advance Soros’ progressive criminal justice reform.

Via his non-profit the Open Society Foundations (OSF), Soros is pumping cash to the media in the form of fellowships, or “Soros Justice Fellowships.”

To receive big payouts, fellows must produce projects that align with Soros’ goals to restructure the U.S. justice system with soft-on-crime policies that favor criminals.

Among the goals is reducing incarceration rates and introducing radical sentencing guidelines.

However, the eligibility for these fellowships is not just limited to journalists. OSF offers three distinct categories of fellowship funding — advocacy, media, and youth activism.

According to scholarship data provided to universities, OSF may pay up to six figures for fellowships. These categories qualify a wide variety of professions such as lawyers, advocates, grassroots organizers, artists, and filmmakers.

Soros Justice Fellowship alums have been at the center of several controversies in recent years due to their activism.

Susan Burton, founder of the criminal justice reform activist group A New Way of Life (ANWOL), and Mark-Anthony Johnson, a longtime ally of Black Lives Matter co-founder Patrisse Cullors, have both made headlines for the radical activism after taking Soros' cash.

The fellowship program isn't new, however, and Soros has offered this funding for over 25 years. A total of 469 individuals have received Soros-funded fellowships since the program's inception.

Most of the earliest fellows involved in journalism went on to become acclaimed reporters across a variety of corporate media outlets.

Below is a full list of Big Media operatives who have received funding from George Soros to promote his radical agenda.

The following are current fellows involved in mainstream media, out of 18 total fellows for 2022:

- Yasmine Arrington, of Washington, D.C., will produce a podcast featuring only “Black and brown youth voices” discussing the criminal justice system, including juvenile probation, reentry, and recidivism. Arrington has written for TeenVogue, Essence, Black Enterprise, Forbes Magazine, Washington Post, and Baltimore Times.
- Zachary Siegel, of Chicago, Illinois, will write and narrate news coverage concerning current approaches to overdose deaths. Siegel has written for Harper's Magazine, New York Times Magazine, The Atlantic, The Nation, New Republic, WIRED, Politico, and Scientific American.
- Irene Franco Rubio, a Phoenix, Arizona, native attending the University of Southern California, will produce a podcast on juvenile minority incarceration and their criminalization in public school systems. Franco Rubio has written for Forbes, USA Today, Teen Vogue, and NPR, as well as worked for Michelle Obama's nonprofit. Franco Rubio was recognized as a scholar by a number of prominent groups: Facebook Journalism Project, Marguerite Casey Foundation's Equal Voice News, International Center for Journalists, and ProPublica Diversity.

Several current fellowships went to budding journalist-activists:

- Tiera Howleit, a student reporter at Indiana University's collegiate paper. Howleit's fellowship profile says that she will use the funds to "elevate the voices of people of color [...] impacted by the criminal justice system." Howleit founded "Black Collegians" in 2020, a social justice advocacy group.
- Katherine Owajori, a pre-law student at USC, will work with Franco Rubio to produce the above-mentioned podcast. Owajori is an active member of Black Lives Matter: Los Angeles.

Soros' influence extends far beyond the media, however.

Soros has been the Democratic Party's top donor for several years, buying himself massive sway in the federal government.

It was also recently revealed that a Soros-funded propaganda group was involved in the Big Tech coverup of the Hunter Biden laptop scandal in the run-up to the 2020 election.

In his explosive new book, "The Man Behind the Curtain: Inside the Secret Network of George Soros," Matt Palumbo exposes how the radical billionaire uses his global groups to peddle influence around the world.

Palumbo details how Soros uses his wealth to fund a power grab that finds its way right into the upper echelons of Democrat President Joe Biden's White House.

Earlier this year, the hugely popular exposé was snubbed from the New York Times "Best Seller" list.

Unsurprisingly, Soros owns millions of dollars worth of stock in the newspaper.
