

Biden's Health Secretary: "I Want to Encourage Children to Have Sex Changes"

Description

USA: President Biden's transgender Assistant Health Secretary Admiral Rachel Levine said Monday that the Biden regime is working to encourage kids to get puberty blockers and sex change surgeries.

"We really want to base our treatment and to affirm and to support and empower these youth — not to limit their participation in activities in sports and even limit their ability to get gender affirmation treatment in their state," Levine told MSNBC.

Informationliberation.com reports: Levine was responding to news that a federal judge in Tennessee temporarily blocked the Biden regime's radical transgender policies allowing transgender workers and students to use bathrooms of the opposite sex in schools and compete in sports with the opposite sex.

The Biden regime declared in April that sex change surgeries for children are "life saving" and threatened that the Department of Justice will hold states "accountable" for banning the macabre procedures.

Then-White House Press Secretary Jen Psaki broke down in tears over the prospect that children could be banned from getting sex changes until they're adults.

HHS Secretary Xavier Becerra said for the record in April that he will do "everything [he] can" to ensure children can get sex changes.

Biden himself told the parents of "transgender" children that "affirming your child's identity is one of the most powerful things you can do to keep them safe."

Swiftly after taking office, Biden also signed an executive order to make sex changes free for all active duty military and veterans.
