

CEO of COVID-19 vaccine maker Moderna worked with Big Pharma billionaire pal of China's Xi while promoting lab where virus escaped

Description

USA/CHINA: The longer the COVID-19 pandemic lasts, the more we learn about its diabolical origins and the key players involved in ensuring that it was not only financed and developed but released on the world by a Chinese Communist regime hell-bent on global domination.

As the walls close in on 'lead American immunologist' Dr. Anthony Fauci regarding what he knew about the virus and when he knew it, other devious connections have been made in recent days that are equally alarming.

For instance, a report published earlier this week has tied the CEO of Moderna, one of the first pharmaceutical companies to develop a COVID-19 vaccine (coincidentally), to a big pharma billionaire who is also an associate of ChiCom Dear Leader Xi Jinping and who actually stumped for the Level 4 lab in Wuhan where the virus is believed to have been created and released.

Big League Politics notes:

Moderna CEO Stephane Bancel, who is pushing experimental COVID-19 vaccines designed to alter the RNA of recipients, previously worked as CEO of BioMerieux, a firm owned by a billionaire who was instrumental in the development of the infamous virology lab in Wuhan, China.

French pharma billionaire Alain Merieux, creator of BioMerieux, once served as the Co-President of the Franco-Chinese Committee on Emerging Infectious Diseases. Through this role, Merieux was instrumental in the development of the P4 Laboratory in Wuhan where the COVID-19 virus may have been synthesized and released to devastate society.

The Chinese-French partnership was key to the lab's development. According to a report from GNews, the government of then-French President Nicolas Sarkozy worked over many years to ensure the construction of the lab, as Merieux was constantly advising Sarkozy to continue working with the ChiCom regime on that and other projects.

The former French leader traveled to China in November 2007 to put ink to an agreement that would “ensure that all necessary measures are taken as soon as possible to implement all projects including the Wuhan P4 laboratory.” And from that point, a course of events was put in place that has culminated in forced changes to lifestyles, losses of life, and trillions in wealth vanquished.

“P4 laboratory construction in Wuhan is very important for Chinese public health and a good symbol of the France China Collaboration in public health,” Xi would say years later as the lab was set to open.

According to the reports, BioMérieux helped with the propaganda end, selling the concept of the controversial infectious disease lab to the Chinese people in and beyond Wuhan. That included disinformation campaign drives with Xi, who portrayed the lab as a breakthrough for public health.

An online profile of Merieux, which has been translated from French, details his deep ties to China; his father-in-law was also a Western collaborate with the brutal dictatorship of Mao Zedong.

“At the very beginning of the 1960s, Alain Mérieux’s father-in-law, Paul Berliet, discovered this country. If he was part of the trip of General de Gaulle, the first Western head of state to go to Beijing in 1965, the heir to the Berliet transport group already knows the highest dignitaries of the Maoist regime, Zhou Enlai and Deng Xiaoping in particular,” the profile notes.

Meanwhile Bancel “was leading Mérieux’s organization in the same role as they were working to create the Wuhan virology lab,” Big League Politics adds.

These revelations come as it appears that

- a) the virus indeed was manufactured in the Wuhan lab;
- b) it was allowed to escape on purpose; and
- c) Fauci was both aware of the research and aware that the infectious diseases agency he has run since the early 1980s helped fund it as well.

A reckoning, indeed.

By JD Heyes

Date Created
June 2021