

Christine Anderson Serious Vaccine Adverse Events Endangering Passengers Across Europe (VIDEO 9 min)

Description

Member of the European Parliament for Germany, Christine Anderson joins Steve Bannon to discuss the global “Airmegeddon” of canceled flights and flight delays that have made commercial aviation a nightmare around the world.

Anderson believes that this is a result of the vaccine mandates that caused those pilots unwilling to submit to the jab to resign and those who took the jab in order to remain employed to now suffer from the resulting adverse events.

She says, “When you look at the data collectors, like EMA – that’s the European Medicines Agency – the data shows, within the first 7 months of rolling out this so-called COVID vaccine, there were 20 times more adverse events reported and 23 times more deaths reported in regards to this COVID ‘vaccine’ than in all other vaccines combined in the last 20 years.

This tracks with the latest reports from US insurance companies that deaths among working age people are up 20% to 40%.

Anderson continues, “So, they should have pulled this stuff off the market right away. The adverse reporting system of the United States is basically showing similar data. And when we’re talking about severe adverse events, we’re not talking about some redness around the injection site or arm hurting or something like that. No, the definition of a severe event is basically hospitalization, so this is what we’re talking about.

“Now, when it comes to flight safety, there’s various regulators in charge of this, there’s the French civil aviation authority, in Germany, it’s the Luftfahrt Bundesamt, you have the EASA [European Union Aviation Safety Agency], the European division of it, you have the FAA. They all should have done their job and made sure that none of these issues in relation to these ‘vaccines’ would pose a potential threat or risk when it comes to flight safety but they haven’t done that.
