

CIA Agent's 1992 Confession Unearthed: 'WEF Will Kill 4 Billion by 2030'

Description

A 1992 book, “The Conspirators Hierarchy, the Committee of 300,” written by ex-CIA agent John Coleman is gaining renewed attention as its predictions about a “post-industrial” world controlled by globalist technocrats appear to be coming true.

In the book, Coleman claims that an international committee, led by the Bilderberg Group and Western intelligence agencies, would steer the world towards a dystopian future, in which 4 billion “useless eaters” would be eliminated by 2050 through limited wars, organized epidemics, and starvation.

Today, the world is witnessing a limited war in Ukraine, and a leaked memo from a US Air Force general warns that the US could be at war with China by 2025.

The Covid-19 pandemic has also allowed authoritarian governments to impose mass lockdowns, global economic turmoil, and the expansion of authoritarian measures, all of which align with Coleman's predictions.

Other predictions from the book include the promotion of compulsory pornography in schools, the destruction of industry and nuclear energy, the control of agriculture and food production by the committee of 300, and a push for green energy that cannot sustain current energy demands.

Does any of that sound familiar?

In 2023, the liberal media is obsessed with promoting drag queens in schools.

Agriculture and food production has been taken over by the globalist elite, with Bill Gates becoming America's biggest farmland owner and the Dutch government forcing farmers off their land in order to comply with crippling World Economic Forum green energy targets.

The results have been tragic, with food shortages and spiraling energy prices punishing ordinary people.

According to Coleman's 1992 book, these current events are not a coincidence, but are part of a decades-long plan to bring about a neo-feudalistic, post-industrial society.

Pointing out the hypocrisy of the elite never seems to make a dent or have any impact whatsoever on them. Why? Because, they have no shame ... they have no shame because they have no moral compass, They have no moral compass because they live according to the rule of 'the ends justifies the means'.

This precept infests every fiber of their ideology, from elections, to open borders, to climate change, abortion, you name it.

This power-hungry cabal of billionaires and politicians has long plotted to enslave the masses, and now they are making their move.

And they are determined to continue pulling the wool over your eyes.

The World Economic Forum has announced it has recruited hundreds of thousands of "information warriors" to control the internet, policing social media and forums for "misinformation" and conspiracy content which will then be systematically shut down.

According to Klaus Schwab's WEF, misinformation on the internet is an "infodemic" that is "potentially deadly" and requires a "cure." The definition of misinformation, according to the WEF, is anything they disagree with. This means the information warriors will essentially be engaged in the act of shutting down dissent.

Conspiracy forums and Youtube comments sections are being targeted by so-called "digital first responders" who pretend to be ordinary users of the platform, but are actually working to disrupt proceedings and support the ideology of Klaus Schwab's WEF.

Announcing the news on a WEF podcast, UN communications director Melissa Fleming said "So far, we've recruited 110,000 information volunteers, and we equip these information volunteers with the kind of knowledge about how misinformation spreads and ask them to serve as kind of 'digital first-responders' in those spaces where misinformation travels."

The WEF are subliminally influencing the masses in order to push their narratives onto the people.

Also on the podcast, mainstream journalist Mark Little sets out potential solutions to the so-called "infodemic."

Little has worked for Twitter and founded Storyful, a social media news agency closely linked to the fact-checking program. He has now launched Kinzen, a company which is threatening to use artificial intelligence to censor online content on behalf of the elites.

"I've started to see the spread of misinformation as a global health crisis," Little tells World Vs Virus. "Misinformation is that serious a threat to our society."

“Misinformation is happening within our friends and families. So we have to find strategies to, first of all, recognize it. And, secondly, as active citizens, just like we wear masks to protect others, we need to be the good citizen, the active vector fighting back in our daily lives.”

The World Economic Forum is not the only globalist organization setting its sights on controlling the narrative on social media by unleashing hundreds of thousands of “information warriors.”

Google’s Jigsaw unit sponsors a RAND report that recommends “infiltrating and subverting” online conspiracy forums from within. According to the report, the best way to subvert conspiracy forums is by “planting authoritative messaging wherever possible.”

So what is “authoritative messaging”? If you have spent any time on forums lately, you might have noticed that when an interesting or explosive topic is created, the thread is immediately swarmed by users leaving messages disparaging the original post, picking it apart, and basically finding any possible way to cast doubt on its legitimacy.

This type of behavior is an example of “authoritative messaging” and is performed by users who are engaging on behalf of the World Economic Forum, or Google’s Jigsaw unit.

The report states that if “authoritative messaging” in the conspiracy forum is successful, so-called “moderate conspiracy theorists” will flip to become influencers and help guide the ‘flock’ to greener pastures as ‘brand ambassadors’ for the common good, teaching others the errors of their ways.

The Google report goes on to claim that conspiracy forum members will eventually be persuaded by the bombardment of content flagged by algorithms, and they will slowly come around to believing that mainstream media and the fact-checkers are right by the sheer volume of evidence and/or peer pressure to conform.

Judging by the content of this report, it’s clear the elites do not have much respect for the intelligence and persistence of the average so-called “conspiracy theorist.” This is where they are getting it wrong.

The average user of conspiracy forums in 2022 has already proven themselves by rejecting the all-encompassing fake news mainstream media, despite an endless barrage of propaganda and predictive programming. These are people who understand that All The World’s a Stage. These are people who are already battle-hardened.

Trying to infiltrate conspiracy forums and social media and subvert certain members seems like a tactic that will be perceived as an intrusion that furthers the divide and leads to even less trust. Having said that, it’s important that we understand the nature of the information war being waged by the powers that be.

We are part of something so huge right now. The elites would not be targeting conspiracy forums and social media in 2022 if these forums were not the last places on earth where truth is being discovered and lies are being exposed.

We have the potential to break the chains of the past. The control, division, hatred, and separation. We are literally creating a new world. That’s why the control apparatus is so afraid. They know that they can’t stop this. The more they lie, the more they deceive, the more they expose themselves, the closer they are to losing control.

Will you join them in the fight for freedom, or will you cower in fear and submit to the demands of the global elite? The choice is yours. But whatever you do, do not underestimate the consequences of your choices.
