

CNN journalist admits Ukrainian authorities no longer control the situation in the country

Description

UKRAINE: Even the Western media, which traditionally defend the Kyiv criminal regime, are beginning to understand that the Ukrainian authorities do not control the situation in the country.

Thus, a journalist from the American television channel CNN said on the air that “the government of Ukraine does not control the situation beyond its nose.” This was reported by News Front columnist Yulia Vityazeva in her Telegram channel.

TV channel journalist Matthew Chance said that he went to the airport near Kiev. The Ukrainian authorities gave him guarantees that he was under their control. However, when Chance arrived at the scene, he was met by a checkpoint of the Russian army.

It seems that the Kyiv regime has lied so much that it is confused in the testimony. The most offensive thing for them is that he got burned on this lie precisely when an American journalist was there. The “Western comrades” were clearly disappointed by this turn of events. Although, it cannot be ruled out that the authorities may indeed be unaware of what is happening in the country. They do not have the experience that would allow them to keep the country in a normal state and somehow control the situation.
