

Deaths from “Unknown” Causes Is Now a Leading Killer in Canada Following the Jab Rollout

Description

CANADA: Deaths from “unknown” causes is now a leading killer in the Canadian Province of Alberta following the jab rollout, according to recent data published by the government.

Public health officials are sounding the alarm after they recorded an unprecedented rise in deaths from “unknown” or “ill-defined” causes in 2020 and 2021.

When compared to pre-pandemic data the total number of deaths without a known cause is over seven times higher than it was in 2019.

Thegatewaypundit.com reports: In total, there were 3,362 of these deaths in 2021, which is more than double the 1,464 in 2020. In 2019, there were only 522.

There is no data in this category prior to 2019.

The leading causes of death in the province are now as follows, via Calgary CTV News:

1. Ill-defined and unknown causes (3,362)
2. Dementia (2,135)
3. Covid-19 (1,950)
4. Chronic ischemic heart disease (1,939)
5. Malignant neoplasms of the trachea, bronchitis, and lung (1,552)
6. Acute myocardial infarction (1,075)
7. Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (1,028)
8. Diabetes Mellitus (728)
9. Stroke (612)
10. Accidental poisoning by and exposure to drugs and other substances (604)

According to Calgary CTV News, the province’s health officials have said they are looking into the data, but “have yet to provide an explanation for the sudden spike in deaths of unknown causes.”

Despite the ‘experts’ dragging their feet to come up with an explanation, there has been an astonishing amount of evidence linking the experimental vaccines to the sudden rise in unexpected deaths. Ever since the vaccine was first introduced in late 2020, insurance companies across the globe have reported a massive 40% increase in death claims, many of which involve working-aged individuals.

There has also been a jaw-dropping rise in mortality among millennials aged 25-34 over the past year and a half. Following the experimental vaccine’s rollout, all-cause mortality jumped by 84% in this age group.

Coincidentally – or not – Alberta’s spike in unexplained deaths coincides perfectly with the introduction of the experimental COVID vaccine. Furthermore, the public health bureaucracy’s failure to classify a cause of death for nearly 3,500 cases – especially with today’s modern technology – is downright inexcusable, albeit unsurprising.

It’s also worth pointing out that Covid deaths amounted to just over half of the total number of deaths with unknown causes, indicating that the spike in death is not being driven predominantly by the virus or the pandemic. This mirrors the data cited above, which also showed that a small percentage of the increase was attributable to Covid deaths.

Unfortunately for Americans, this type of data is being suppressed and our public health officials are doing everything in their power to downplay the adverse side effects that are caused by the experimental vaccines while continuing to green-light more doses. However, either way – if the vaccines are driving this massive uptick in unexplained death, or not – this issue needs to be seriously investigated, but the ‘experts are refusing to do so in order to keep the approved narrative intact.

Meanwhile, the body count just keeps on piling up. This universal Covid vaccination push will go down as one of – if not the – worst atrocities ever perpetrated on mankind.

How many more unexplained deaths need to keep popping up until Americans and the rest of the world see some accountability for what’s happened?

Sadly, we are likely in for a lot more in the near future.
