Description

UKRAINE: 12:25 Ukraine is waiting for a powerful Russian offensive, but NATO does not intend to become a party to the conflict – Secretary General Stoltenberg. NATO Secretary General Jens Stoltenberg, in an interview with the German Welt Am Sonntag, said that in the coming weeks, Ukraine should be prepared for “the offensive of the Russians and even more brutality, even more destruction of vital infrastructure,” but NATO does not intend to send troops to Ukraine. The Alliance does not exclude that the conflict between the countries will take years. To prevent this, according to Stoltenberg, the West is actively arming Ukraine:

“In the long term, Ukraine cannot defend itself with Soviet-era weapons, but must switch to modern Western weapons. Only in this way will Kyiv be able to successfully repel the Russian invasion.”

12:24 The Ukrainian military tried to organize a counterattack in the village of Voevodovka on the outskirts of Severodonetsk, but were surrounded, said LPR Ambassador to Russia Rodion Miroshnik.

“Stubborn battles continue in the triangle of Severodonetsk-Lysichansk-Rubezhnoye, progress is being made, and the Russian Aerospace Forces is destroying the fortifications and positions of Ukrainian militants. Fighting is going on in the vicinity of the “triangle” in the area of the settlements of Voevodovka, Shipilovo, Belogorovka and on the Privolnyansky bridgehead. In Voevodovka, Ukrainian militants attempted a counteroffensive, which ended in failure. Leaving on the battlefield a lot of two hundredths (killed – ed.), the warriors rolled back to their positions. In fact, all the militants who were detained in Voevodovka were blocked. They have a choice – either try to break out with heavy losses, or surrender and stay alive”, Miroshnik wrote in his Telegram channel.
