

Dr. Fauci Funded the Sudan Bio Lab Seized by Extremists

Description

On Tuesday, the World Health Organization warned of a “huge biological risk” after rebels took control of Sudan’s National Public Health Laboratory. United States government records show that Dr. Fauci’s NIH significantly funded the National Public Health Laboratory in Sudan.

Records show that Fauci’s National Institute of Health and The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation provided 20 million dollars in grants to study cholera at the National Public Health Laboratory in Sudan. The study was titled “Dried Blood Spots for Measuring Vibrio Cholera-specific Immune Responses.”

Cholera is one of the diseases the World Health Organization fears could escape from the Sudan bio lab. Cholera causes severe dehydration and can be deadly.

Records also show that the CDC revealed in 2022, “In May 2018, CDC supported the establishment of the first viral load monitoring facility at South Sudan’s National Public Health Laboratory (NPHL),”

Following Tuesday’s horrific news, Dr. Peter A. McCullough, who has stood firm against the MRNA Covid Vax, wrote, “Biological threat research must be halted. Another lab breach on the verge. Fighters occupy bio lab in Sudan holding samples of polio and measles, creating an “extremely, extremely dangerous” situation, @WHO warned Tuesday.”
