

Dutch Farmers Rebel: UN's 2030 Agenda Is Behind Draconian AG Shutdown

Description

NETHERLANDS: The war on food in the Netherlands is spawned by the UN's 2030 Agenda on Sustainable Development, aka Technocracy. Controlling food, controls populations. Taking away fertilizer controls food. Dutch farmers recognize this and are fighting back; we need to support this important part of the resistance in every way possible. Famines kill.

The war on food is not a conspiracy theory. Don't let anyone browbeat you with that nonsense. The UN has declared war on ranchers and farmers throughout the world. They have openly written about their hostility toward industrial farming and ranching, substituting other sources of protein such as crickets and other insects. The Netherlands government bought the UN's propaganda hook, line and sinker, and proceeded to demolish its own ag industry. This is a war against all humanity and will have devastating effects unless it is terminated immediately. ? TN Editor

State control over food production and distribution facilitates deep control over people, Dutch commentator Eva Vlaardingerbroek said while discussing the Dutch farmers' protests in an interview aired on Tuesday's Breitbart News Daily podcast with host Alex Marlow.

Dutch farmers are protesting the government's attempts to restrict their operations as part of its "climate change" agenda.

Vlaardingerbroek explained the Dutch government's pretexts for restricting Dutch farmers' animal husbandry.

"Our government is following a climate agenda — the 2030 Agenda, more broadly speaking — and they're saying that the Netherlands has nitrogen and ammonia emissions that are too high, threatening the climate [and] local nature, and that they need to be cut down."

She continued, "For some reason, they're not coming after the airlines. They're not coming after any other industry that actually is a contributor in these emissions, apart from the Dutch farmers."

The Dutch government says 30 percent of the country's livestock will need to be eliminated to curb “nitrogen pollution” in accordance with its ostensibly environmental goals.

Vlaardingerbroek noted that the Dutch government intends to seize lands from farmers as part of its “climate change” policy. She remarked, “We have mass migration [and] have open borders. We have so many immigrants coming to our country, and the government has no place to house them.”

“There are actual state documents that have surfaced in which it is black on white written that ... they’re going to actually use the expropriated land for building refugee crisis center,” she added.

Vlaardingerbroek observed the commonalities between Western governments’ “climate change” edicts and decrees ostensibly issued to reduce COVID-19 transmission: expanding state power with commensurate violations of individual rights.

“It’s always always you — ordinary civilian, ordinary citizen — that has to give up his or her rights,” she stated. “So that’s the trend here. That’s what people need to start seeing. That’s the real agenda that our governments have, and of course, the food supply — the farmers — what better way to control people than by controlling their food supply?”

She concluded, “This way, the state is able to have full control over your lives if they dictate what you can’t eat, and what you can eat, and when you can eat.”
