

Dutch Protesters Pour Manure On Government Offices Over Industry-Killing Regulations

Description

NETHERLANDS: Dutch farmers who have been protesting for weeks over the government's radical plan to cut nitrogen emissions by 50% – 95% by 2030 have taken things to the next level – pouring manure on government offices in response to the plan which would cause widespread chaos – including the death of 1/3 of Dutch farms.

The Dutch protesters are pouring manure on government offices, flooding streets, and becoming all together ungovernable. This uprising is in response to the WEF controlled government shutting down farms to "save the planet." You have to see this:

Pissed off protesters became aggressive with police last week, with angry farmers demanding that the Hague backtrack on their 'green' agenda.

Dutch farmers have been protesting in the streets for days against the government's plan to target the livestock sector with nitrogen emission cuts.

The Dutch government said “The honest message... is that not all farmers can continue their business,”.

Bloomberg also reported last week that several farmers showed up to parliament with cows in tow to protest the policy – with some threatening to slaughter them on the spot.

“If the nitrogen measures are adopted, one of these two ladies [cows] will not go home but will receive a one-way ticket to the slaughterhouse,” said farmer Koos Cromwijk in a statement to Dutch news agency ANP outside parliament (via The Counter Signal).

And what did the Dutch government have to say about the new law?

“The honest message ... is that not all farmers can continue their business.”
