

Elon Musk Set to Step Down as Twitter CEO

Description

USA: Speculation rages as to his replacement.

Elon Musk is set to step down as Twitter CEO after he promised to abide by the results of a poll, the final results of which showed a majority of respondents desiring to see him give up the position.

Musk posted the poll late last night and left it to run for only 12 hours.

“Should I step down as head of Twitter?” asked Musk. “I will abide by the results of this poll.”

Should I step down as head of Twitter? I will abide by the results of this poll.

— Elon Musk (@elonmusk) December 18, 2022

The final result showed that a majority of 57.5% to 42.5% wanted to see him vacate the position.

However, Musk followed up the poll with a warning as to who his replacement might be.

“As the saying goes, be careful what you wish, as you might get it,” tweeted the Tesla founder.

As the saying goes, be careful what you wish, as you might get it

— Elon Musk (@elonmusk) December 18, 2022

“The question is not finding a CEO, the question is finding a CEO who can keep Twitter alive,” Musk later commented, suggesting the fact that the platform is a giant black hole for money and cannot turn a profit has turned him away.

Some speculated that Musk knew he would lose the poll once far-left Twitter mobs activated to swing the result, and that this gives him an easy way to bow out.

Others hinted that Musk has already selected a new CEO, the announcement of which will terrify leftists even more than him being in charge.

I have a feeling Elon Musk already has a Twitter CEO picked out and this person will piss the left off even more ?

— Collin Rugg (@CollinRugg) December 18, 2022

Some think former White House advisor Jared Kushner is one of the favorites to take the job, given Elon was pictured watching the World Cup final in Qatar with Kushner yesterday.

Jared Kushner would be an interesting and qualified Twitter CEO choice.

— Brigitte Gabriel (@ACTBrigitte) December 19, 2022

Elon and Jared Kushner at the World Cup today, negotiating for new Twitter CEO?
pic.twitter.com/jnyq6cCEAQ

— CHIZ (@CHIZMAGA) December 18, 2022

Over the last few days, Musk has been at war with regime journalists, some of whom had their accounts suspended, although later restored, for their involvement in doxxing Musk's personal location.

by Paul Joseph Watson

Category

1. Economy-Business-Fin/Invest
2. Freedom-Free speech-Resistance & H-rights
3. Main

Date Created

12/20/2022