

Iraq Kurdish Capital Struck By Missiles Launched From Outside The Country

Description

Update (2130ET): Initial reports that missiles ‘struck’ the US Embassy in Erbil, Iraq have been downgraded.

A dozen ballistic missiles launched from outside the country did hit the northern Kurdish regional capital on Sunday – however there were no casualties, and no parties have claimed responsibility.

According to Reuters, a US State Department spokesperson called it an “outrageous attack,” however no Americans were hurt – nor was there any damage to US government facilities in Erbil.

Kurdish officials did not reveal where the missiles struck – however a spokesperson for regional authorities said there were no flight interruptions at Erbil airport, according to the report.

On Friday we noted that the Iran nuclear talks had been abruptly suspended. As the W/SJ wrote at the time; “The Iran nuclear talks broke off Friday with no agreement, imperiling negotiations... After weeks of round-the-clock negotiations in Vienna, the breakoff in talks significantly raises the prospect that efforts to revive the 2015 nuclear deal may fail.”

And then there's this;

Previous #IRGC attacks against U.S. targets in #Syria & #Iraq have drawn U.S. retaliation — normally in the form of striking isolated, unmanned #PMU targets.

That minimalist response has rarely deterred #Iran though — and tonight seems far more significant.

If early reports are confirmed and Iran indeed attacked the US Consulate, we think it's safe to assume the talks are over. Needless to say, oil is going to have an interesting day on Monday.
