

Is the Khazarian Cult afraid of Elon Musk?

Description

USA: Elon Musk has already stirred the Khazarian pot, and it seems that he is not going to be forgiven any time soon. Musk declared as he was on the brink of taking over Twitter: “Given that Twitter serves as the de facto public town square, failing to adhere to free speech principles fundamentally undermines democracy.”

Obviously that didn't sit well with people like Max Boot, the man who has been saying for years that Russia is the biggest threat in the political world. Boot said:

“I am frightened by the impact on society and politics if Elon Musk acquires Twitter. He seems to believe that on social media anything goes. For democracy to survive, we need more content moderation, not less.”

Frightened? Musk said that he is all for free speech and that Twitter should never have censored the New York Post's Hunter Bidens' laptop story in 2020. Musk said: “Suspending the Twitter account of a major news organization for publishing a truthful story was obviously incredibly inappropriate.” Isn't that a truthful statement? In other words, if the Hunter Biden story is true, why not publish it? Why conceal the truth?

Musk's bold claim again wasn't well received by the Khazarian Cult, the very ideological organization that has a history of blocking people from expressing their views online and in the academic world. If you think that is false, then perhaps you haven't read the work of Deborah Lipstadt.

In any event, it is pretty obvious that the Khazarian Cult is shaking because Musk doesn't seem to align with their ideology. Listen to the Jewish Chronicle:

“Let's get one thing out of the way: Elon Musk is not Jewish. But his acquisition of Twitter comes amid longstanding problems with antisemitism and hate speech on the platform — and Jewish users fear his free-speech orientation could make things worse...

“The head of the Anti-Defamation League, which has publicly pressed Twitter to identify and flush out antisemitism on the platform, raised alarm in a tweet thread shortly after the news broke.”

Well, I think everyone seems to be tired of the draconian rules that the Khazarian Cult has imposed on much of the news media outlets. They have good reasons to be worried because the world is bigger than the Khazarian Cult itself.
