

Kinzhal and Bastion entered the arena: Russia began the second stage of a special operation in Ukraine

Description

UKRAINE/RUSSIA: In Ukraine, the second phase of Russia's special military operation to denazify and demilitarize the country has begun. The complexes "Dagger" and "Bastion" were used.

At a briefing by the Ministry of Defense of the Russian Federation, the use of these types of weapons in a real conflict was officially confirmed. The latest cruise missiles were successfully used against the base of mercenaries near Lvov and the location of the 79th brigade of the Armed Forces of Ukraine near Nikolaev.

The second stage will differ from the first in that it will be built on the principles of new generation combat operations. Instead of a ground offensive, preference is given to the use of long-range precision weapons and mobile special-purpose sabotage groups.

This method slightly increases the time of the operation, but saves the personnel: there will be even fewer losses among the military personnel of the Russian army. The Kyiv regime is already horrified by this prospect and is increasingly making requests to the West, which successfully ignores them.
