

Leaked Internal Messages Show Twitter Employees Debating Whether To Ban Libs Of TikTok

Description

In April, Twitter account Libs of TikTok – which aggregates videos posted on TikTok by deranged leftists – was doxxed by the Washington Post's Taylor Lorenz. The doxxing notably backfired, as the account's followers nearly doubled in one week.

While LoTT initially gained fame posting clips of unhinged school teachers and other leftists, lately the account has been featuring children exposed to drag shows.

This is from a “family-friendly all ages” drag and pride event in Austin, TX today.

? @TaylerUSA pic.twitter.com/7fBzrHiOTO

— Libs of TikTok (@libsoftiktok) June 12, 2022

A San Francisco middle school brought a drag queen named “Nicole Jizz” to perform for students today. He deleted the video but not before I saved it. <https://t.co/X4QrxH5l8L>

— Libs of TikTok (@libsoftiktok) June 8, 2022

On Monday, Libs of TikTok announced in a blog post that they had obtained leaked chats between Twitter employees discussing whether to ban her.

Via Libs of TikTok (emphasis ours),

Conservative Twitter accounts are dropping like flies. Just today, Allie Stuckey was locked out for “hateful conduct.” Her crime? She criticized Fox News for celebrating a child’s gender transition. There was nothing hateful about her tweet. She wasn’t harassing anyone. She certainly didn’t call for violence. She merely dissented.

That’s all it takes.

Project Veritas recently exposed Twitter’s bias with undercover video of an employee admitting they censor conservatives. But we really didn’t need hidden camera footage. Their bias is blatant. It’d take effort to not see it.

We’ve experienced our share of it firsthand. It started in April when we got two back-to-back suspensions. Following those suspensions, the Left was emboldened. Knowing I wanted to remain anonymous, they went on a mission to expose me in the hopes of intimidating me into silence. This culminated with my being doxxed by Taylor Lorenz at the Washington Post.

Instagram got on the censorship wagon as well. They “mistakenly” disabled our account and reinstated it after realizing their “error.” Linktree suspended us, too.

We received our third Twitter suspension just last week for posting fliers of pride events. I had created a “mega drag thread” which documented the sharp rise in drag events for kids. It’s a disturbing trend; the Left has become obsessed with ensuring your 4-year-old has access to men dressed as women while dancing provocatively for cash. The fact that I was noticing—and drawing attention to how widespread this trend really is—seemed to trigger the Left. Big accounts on Twitter started calling for my suspension while labeling me a “domestic terrorist.”

The below Slack conversation between Twitter employees occurred today against this backdrop, and echoes some of the charges leveled at us by far left activists. It was shared with us by a Twitter employee, who wishes to remain anonymous. We verified the names and images of the employees before we obscured them.

Thread

#social-watercooler

[Redacted]
Today at 8:22 AM

<https://twitter.com/AriDrennen/status/1536030895429234688>

feels more likely that libsoftiktok will get a verified badge out of this than a platform ban, happy pride (edited)

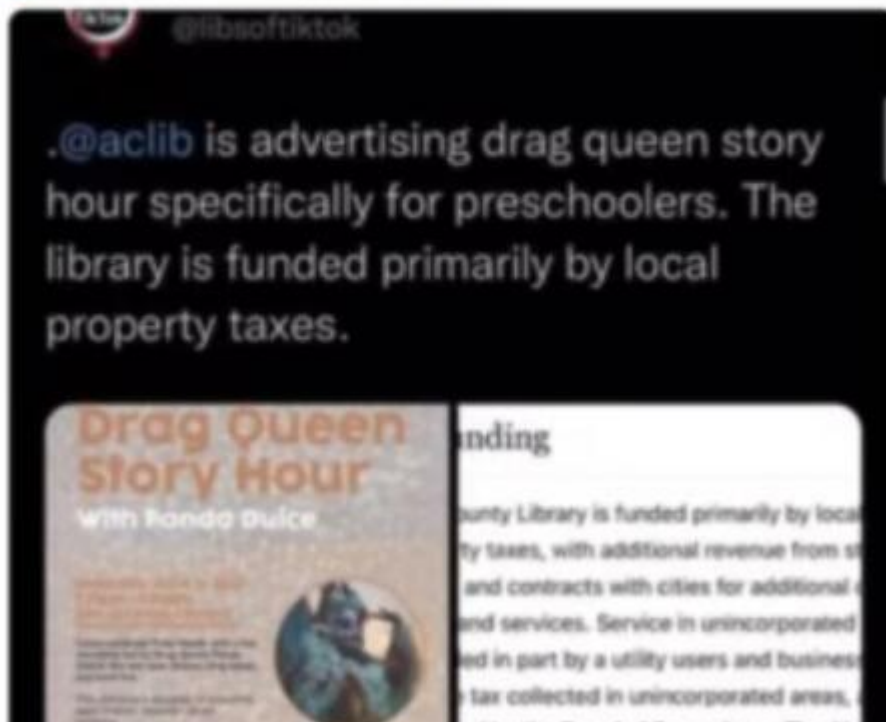

Ari Drennen @AriDrennen

Chaya Raichik of Libs of Tik Tok is going to get somebody killed. <https://pbs.twimg.com/media/FVET9YTUUA2bIV.jpg>

Twitter | Yesterday at 10:01 AM

  5h ago
the twitter equivalent of "i'm not touching you i'm not touching you"

  n ago
T

  5h ago
this has been escalating for months fwiw

  n ago
but our expectations out of twitter are so low right now that the devil himself is having to squat to get to their level

  5h ago
Ugh

  5h ago
like i don't get how this account, which exists solely to generate targeted violence at marginalized people, continues to be allowed to post

Thread

#social-watercooler

 [Redacted] 1h ago

But if we deplatform this account, we might erode trust in our platform from users who already think we're irredeemably biased against conservatives 🤔

 [Redacted] 1h ago

I mean we successfully deplatformed Trump - I don't think deplatforming Libs of TikTok is going to cause a mass exodus but I guess it may not be in our "fiduciary" interest to enact a ban on a high profile account right now...

  4h ago
trans people are being targeted for genocidal violence during pride month,

  4h ago
like i said, our expectations are low given that when james damore came on with his transphobic misogyny, twitter gave him a verified badge and let him go by "fired for truth"

  4h ago
 I apologize - I was not speaking from my own perspective but applying a commentary on how leadership has behaved recently. I could have phrased that better and will be more conscious in future messages. I despise and despair the activity that is currently flourishing on our platform and empowering white supremacists/fascists to act with impunity in conducting harmful emotional and physical violence on trans folx and the broader LGBTQ+ community.

  4h ago
nods gotcha, thanks for clarifying

There are a few tweeps (that's what Twitter employees call themselves) involved in this exchange. As you can see, they're weighing the pros and cons of banning us. One of them expresses concern that a ban will only validate the charge that Twitter is biased against conservatives.

The reference to Trump's "successful" deplatforming is interesting. He was permanently banned for incitement to violence — the same charge the Left hopes will stick to us.

Concern is then raised about fiduciary duties, but an ultra-woke tweep fires back: "How dare you bring up fiduciary duties while trans people are literally being wiped off the face of the earth!" Like a good little ally, the rebuked tweep apologizes and promises to do better in the future.

Perhaps most remarkable is how they parrot the same lines we hear from far-left activists. There's no debate about whether we're actually terrorists, bent on exterminating the entire LGBT community. In their view, that's just a given. They believe right along with the extremist activists that we exist "solely to generate targeted violence at marginalized people." The only thing they're willing to debate is what should be done about us. Do they take us out now for engaging in targeted genocidal violence, or wait for a more opportune time?

But again, you don't need leaked messages to know just how biased and agenda-driven these people are. The messages only confirm what we already see with our own eyes every day.

by Tyler Durden

Category

1. Freedom-Free speech-Resistance & H-rights
2. Main
3. Media-Soc. media-Internet

Date Created

06/16/2022