

North Carolina Parents Protest Elementary School's 'After School Satan Club'

Description

USA: After school "Satan Clubs" are popping up all over the United States and parents are fighting back.

This time parents in Greensboro, North Carolina are protesting after flyers were handed out to students at Joyner Elementary School advertising an after-school Satan Club

The Satanic Temple is trying to establish a Satan Club at Joyner Elementary School and other schools in the same Greensboro school district.

Parents gathered for a prayer rally and made it clear to the school that they do not want a Satan Club inside of the school.

WGHP reported:

Dozens of people gathered in Greensboro on Friday to hold a prayer rally against a controversial after-school Satan club.

People living along Normandy Road did not want the rally so close to their homes. One homeowner parked her van on the sidewalk to block the group.

Greensboro police had officers stationed at Joyner Elementary School to make sure things stayed under control.

About 50 people gathered with signs in hand, and some got on bended knees to pray.

"Kind of a rallying thing to say 'we here in Greensboro does not want this in our schools,'" said Tempe Moore, organizer of the prayer rally.

The group does not want the after-school Satan club to gather inside Joyner Elementary

School or any Guilford County School.

Late last week flyers went out to students advertising the club.

“This is not a time for good men to do nothing. It’s a time to let our voices be heard,” Moore said.

The Satanic Temple filed a lawsuit against a Pennsylvania elementary school last week for refusing to host an “After School Satan Club.”

The lawsuit accuses the Northern Elementary School in York, Pennsylvania, of violating the Constitution.

Satan is after our children. Pray for this nation.
