

Pentagon GOES ROGUE: Any abortion laws enacted following Supreme Court decision will be ignored

Description

USA: We have received word that the Pentagon (Pentagram) will not be allowing any new abortion laws as a result of the Supreme Court's decision in Dobbs v. Jackson Women's Health Organization to stand.

Secretary of Defense Lloyd J. Austin III issued a statement in response to the SCOTUS decision basically stating that abortion will remain legal, regardless of what the highest court in the land thinks about it.

"Nothing is more important to me or to this Department than the health and well-being of our Service members, the civilian workforce and DoD families," Austin said.

"I am committed to taking care of our people and ensuring the readiness and resilience of our Force," he added.

"The Department is examining this decision closely and evaluating our policies to ensure we continue to provide seamless access to reproductive health care as permitted by federal law."

According to Politico, the Department of Defense (DoD) does not yet have any policy to announce that would accommodate female service members who want to murder their babies but currently live in states where the gruesome practice is now illegal.

"Female troops seeking the procedure already face steep hurdles to getting the care they need: They cannot get abortions at military medical facilities, and federal law also prevents troops from using their Tricare health insurance to cover the cost of the procedures at private facilities, unless the life of the mother is at risk due to the Hyde Amendment," Politico reported.

ANARCHY: America's most powerful institutions are planning to ignore the SCOTUS ruling

Austin's use of the word "continue" to describe the seamless access to abortion he says will remain in the military points to the fact that large factions of American institutions are planning to flat-out disobey and rebel against the court ruling.

Both the aforementioned ruling and the overturning of Roe v. Wade represent a major blow to the baby murder industry, which Leftist women rely on as a key component of their identity.

The assumption, based on the DoD and the Pentagon statement is that "reproductive health care," as they are erroneously calling it, will continue to be provided in violation of the Supreme Court rulings.

Someone on Twitter asked if any of this is actually legal, to which the simple answer is: no, it is not legal. But disregarding the law no longer seems to come with any consequences, at least not for Leftists who want to continue living in utter sin and depravity without consequences.

"The feds don't have to acknowledge state laws," suggested another. "Federal offices and such operate under federal jurisdiction, not state jurisdiction. State governments can't go after federal employees and such operating on federal land."

Another called this an insurrection against SCOTUS, which is exactly what it is – and it is being sanctioned by the very same Biden regime that claims the Jan. 6, 2021, incident was the worst thing to ever happen in America.

"So then what's the point of the Supreme Court?" asked another – great question.

Perhaps it is time to just shut the government down completely until we can get to the bottom of this, said someone else, perhaps partially tongue-in-cheek but also making a great point about how this so-called government causes more harm than good, much like Wuhan coronavirus (Covid-19) "vaccines."

"The military is ruling over the Supreme Court?" asked another. "What does the Pentagon have to do with the rule of law?"

Someone else echoed this by pointing out that the Pentagon has no say whatsoever over the law and is stepping completely outside the bounds of its jurisdiction.
