Description

The bizarre suicide death of Mark Middleton, Bill Clinton's former advisor who linked the former president to Jeffrey Epstein, is now an "OPEN" investigation, according to reports.

Mark Middleton, former President Bill Clinton's special advisor from Little Rock, Arkansas who connected the former president to deceased pedophile Jeffrey Epstein, was found hanging from a tree with a shotgun blast through his chest and an extension cord around his neck on May 7.

Middleton was responsible for bringing Epstein and Ghislaine Maxwell to the White House numerous times and flight logs reveal he was a regular passenger on Epstein's 'Lolita Express', according to The Daily Mail.

"The Middleton family has lost an inspiring and dedicated leader, as well as a son, brother, husband, and father," a Facebook post said. "Mark leaves behind a company that he helped build from the ground up alongside his family and was proud to run for the last 25 years."

"In earlier days, Middleton's fundraising skills helped land him a job in the White House. He was finance director for Bill Clinton's presidential campaign, and later special assistant to Clinton under chief of staff Thomas "Mack" McLarty," Arkansas Business reported.

The cause of death was not immediately disclosed.

Now this, Radar Online reported Saturday that an investigation into Mark Middleton's death is now open.

The bizarre suicide death of Bill Clinton's former advisor linked to billionaire perv Jeffrey Epstein is now an "OPEN" investigation, Radar can exclusively report.

The stunning turn of events comes after a series of explosive RadarOnline.com stories questioning the suicide death of Clinton moneyman, Mark Middleton, who was found May 7 hanging from a tree with a shotgun blast through his chest and an extension cord around his neck.

RadarOnline.com learned about the surprise twist after it filed a Freedom of Information request with the Perry County Sheriff's Department demanding copies of the police report and crime scene photos of grisly death in a 1,100-acre farm linked to the former president just outside Perryville, Arkansas.

In an email reply, Sheriff Scott Montgomery tells Radar he cannot release the police report because the once open-and-shut case is an active investigation.

"At this time this is an open investigation, and we are not releasing any information," Montgomery said in a June 2nd email, without elaborating.

RadarOnline.com has also learned the Perry County Coroner is also refusing to release any details about Middleton's death because of the alleged open investigation.

The news comes after a second Clinton associate was also found dead last month in eerily similar circumstances.

Ashley Haynes, 47, was found drowned in an Arkansas River with an extension cord knotted to her ankle and attached to a concrete block. She had been seen just months before visiting Clinton adviser and longtime Epstein Pal Mark Middleton.
