

Protests against vaccinations continue in France

Description

FRANCE: Opponents of the compulsory COVID-19 vaccination are holding rallies in France.

Thousands of people in cities across France have come out to protest, demanding the abolition of compulsory vaccinations. According to the French government, 250,000 demonstrators are expected across the country.

The first images from the rallies have started to appear on social media. They show large crowds of people marching through the streets of their towns and cities with placards in their hands, shouting slogans.
