

Rumble SPAC Explodes Higher After CEO Offers Joe Rogan $100 Million “To Make The World A Better Place”

Description

USA: Well, this might change the narrative!

Just hours after Spotify CEO Daniel Ek affirmed he will keep the company’s cash-cow (to placate shareholders, rejecting demands from the mob to cancel the world’s most successful podcast), but was careful to rebuke Joe Rogan (to placate SJWs and ranting staff who are ‘triggered’), Rumble CEO Chris Pavlovski has sent a letter to The Joe Rogan Experience, offering the podcaster $100 million over four years to bring his ‘free speech’ discussions to an uncensored platform.

Dear Joe,

*We stand with you, your guests, and your legion of fans in desire for real conversation. So we’d like to offer you 100 million reasons to make the world a better place.

*How about you bring all your shows to Rumble, both old and new, with no censorship, for 100 million bucks over four years?

*This is our chance to save the world.

*And yes, this is totally legit.

Pavlovski says “we are ready to fight alongside you...”

Which raises the question – where did Rumble get $100 million from?

Maybe this is the answer...CFVI – the Rumble-linked SPAC – is soaring to record highs, now up over 40%...

As the huge short interest in the stocks feels the squeeze...

As a reminder, CF Acquisition Corp. VI jumped after Rumble, that's combining with the SPAC, reported a 19% growth in monthly active users in January over the previous month.

- Rumble monthly active users hit 39 million last month.
- Rumble reports 10.8 billion minutes watched and an average of 4,383 hours of uploaded video per day in January.

Pavlovski retweeted Dinesh D'Souza's tweet suggesting a shift to Rumble over the weekend...

Joe Rogan needs to upload all his episodes—especially the ones removed by Spotify—on Rumble. Rumble now seems to be the only video platform that protects open debate. Facebook and YouTube are the Pravda and Izvestia of our time, vehicles of state-approved propaganda

Is this the way forward – two internets: one echo-chamber for the left and one open, free-speech, uncensored town-square for everyone else.
