

Steve Bannon: Jared Kushner Is Transhumanist, Rushed ‘Experimental Gene Therapy/Vaccine’ In Bid For Immortality

Description

USA: Jared Kushner clearly identifies himself as a Transhumanist who seeks immortality through science, and it is now clear why he should get the major credit for railroading Operation Warp Speed in a quest to accelerate H+, or Humans 2.0. Transhumanism is the most dangerous religion the world has ever known.

Former Trump White House adviser and campaign manager tore into his one-time West Wing colleague Jared Kushner on Friday after Kushner said he believed he might “live forever.”

Kushner made the odd comments, which sparked a slew of media headlines in a conversation with former Trump official Richard Grenell. Kushner said:

From the last year, the one thing I've tried to put a priority on since I left the White House was, you know, getting some exercise in. I think that there is a good probability that my generation is, hopefully with the advances in science, either the first generation to live forever, or the last generation that's going to die. So, we need to keep ourselves in pretty good shape.

Bannon had fun with the comment and shared on Gettr a barb aimed at Kushner, calling him a “Transhumanist.”

Bannon added Kushner “believes it’s a real possibility that he could ‘live forever and never die’ put himself in charge of Project Warp Speed, the effort to rush an experimental gene therapy/vaccine through trials toward an Emergency Use Authorizationnow things begin to become clear.”

Encyclopedia Britannica defines “transhumanism” as a “social and philosophical movement devoted to promoting the research and development of robust human-enhancement technologies.”
