

Tucker Carlson Reacts To This And The Mainstream Media Screaming That It's "Dangerous To Democracy" To Release The Tapes

Description

Fox News host Tucker Carlson warned Washington that he is prepared to release some of the "hidden" footage from the January 6th, 2021 riot at the Capitol as early as next week.

House Speaker Kevin McCarthy gave Carlson exclusive access to over 41,000 hours of Capitol surveillance footage from the riot, leaving Democrat lawmakers and media personalities apoplectic in recent weeks.

"The defenders of democracy are defending democracy again," he told his audience Thursday night. "They're telling you it's really, really dangerous."

Carlson explained that the thousands of hours of surveillance footage from January 6th "has been hidden from the public for two years" while a "tiny group of people gets to make up stories about what happened that day and change the country on the basis of those stories."

The Fox News host cited a Rasmussen poll that indicates 80% of likely voters think it's important the public see videos that had previously remained hidden.
