

U.S. Website Seizures Is The 'Act of a Tyrant'

Description

USA: United States has become increasingly tyrannical in the past hundred or so years, but the seizure of journalistic websites has to be one of the most obvious. Do the rulers of the U.S. even try to pretend they want free speech anymore?

With obvious censorship of those in America who dissent and research and use their own critical thinking and discernment to come to their own conclusions, it has become blatant that there is no such thing as a Constitution that will "protect" the rights of anyone.

Ron Paul Institute Director Daniel McAdams appeared on RT International to discuss the U.S. government's seizure of more than 30 news websites in Iran and the Middle East including at least one in "ally" Iraq. While the U.S. lies and talks up its support for press freedom internationally, this seizure demonstrates that the only press considered "free" by the US government is the press that praises the US government. Watch the interview here:

Are any of the slaves still living under the illusion of freedom?

Going to @PressTV's website gives this message now. The US codes cited are civil & criminal forfeiture and powers given to the US president during a national emergency.

The cold reality is that the U.S. government believes they own everyone and everything. The last time I checked, that's the definition of slavery.

"This American ban on the Al Masirah Net website and other friendly website reveals, once again, the falsehood of the slogans of freedom of expression and all the other headlines promoted by the United States of America, including its inability to confront the truth.”

According to a report by RT, Washington’s apparent move comes just a day after the newly elected Iranian President Ebrahim Raisi urged the US to lift all sanctions on Tehran and rejoin the 2015 nuclear deal, negotiated by the Obama administration but unilaterally repudiated by President Donald Trump in 2018. Raisi called on the US to “live up to your commitments” in the deal, known as the Joint Comprehensive Plan of Action (JCPOA). He also said the Iranian ballistic missile program was “not up for negotiation.”

Could this be ramping up of tensions toward a war? Or is this a psychological operation designed to “prove” the U.S. totalitarian regime can silence and seize anything they want? Hard to say, but continue to use critical thinking. Use discernment and think about things instead of just accepting them. This is an issue that could be a part of the overall agenda, but a smaller part than the “vaccine.”

What do you think?
