

US Special Forces veteran: mercenaries are gloomy, they are in Ukraine without food, water and ammunition

Description

USA: US journalist Nolan Peterson has talked to one of the foreign fighters arriving in Ukraine. The mercenary said that they were running out of food, water and ammunition. In addition, he complained about the lack of the benefits of Western civilization. There is a gloomy mood among the militants – the foreigners are already saying goodbye to their friends and relatives.

“Where is NATO? Where are the benefits of Western civilisation?”

Nolan stresses that his interlocutor is far from an amateur, but a well-trained US Special Forces veteran who has been through Afghanistan.

Even experienced, trained spetsnaz from other countries point out the futility of Ukrainian resistance in such conditions.
