

USA Eroding from Within: A Disaster Whose Time Has Come

Description

USA: My worst fear — our worst fear! — is coming true, just as I said it would almost a decade ago.

That worry was — much like what happened to Germany — the reputation of the United States would become so disgustingly disreputable that the community of nations could not help but arrive at a consensus conclusion that all the countries of the world had to gang up on the USA and put it out of its sack-of-shit lying misery before it could do any more damage to everyone else.

(Except Germany never deserved the bad reputation it was given by worldwide Jewish media, whereas the United States more than obviously does, given its never-ending string of invasions under phony pretenses during the last 200 years.)

(And Americans have become so comatose that they watch in stupefied incredulity as their lives are being destroyed by obvious lies they are simply too immobilized to contradict, never mind resist, and too stupid to even understand.)

Somewhere between bogus wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, that fatal point of self-destructive no-return has now been passed. All the foolish histrionics about Ukraine are merely more dirt covering the coffin of the corpse of the USA. What still astonishes me is that the worldwide invasion and mercy killing of America has not already happened, given the level of demonic abuse and exploitation the U.S. has wreaked on every nation in the world for longer than any of us can remember.

Then I started thinking, especially given the rapid and chaotic destabilization the U.S. is now undergoing, that maybe this final destruction already has happened or is happening as we speak, and we simply haven't realized it. I mean, the deliberate sabotage and erosion have been so clumsily obvious.

Count the atrocities if you wish. Phony election, poison vaccines, deliberate destruction of the food supply, telling us we must eat bugs . . . the list is long.

A military that prioritizes buggery over national defense? The world laughs at this with an apoplectic hysteria. A president who needs a male nurse to wipe his ass at a moment's notice and a wife ready to feed him drugs to keep him awake does not exactly look like the hero who will save us, does it?

But then a further epiphany revealed the more likely scenario.

Why would all these countries bother to invade America when the perverted leaders of the United States, bought and paid for by the international bankers, are effectively conducting the tortuous task of destroying America from within?

No foreign invasion necessary, thank you, for a decaying country that has been sold out by the psychopaths pretending to defend it, wouldn't you say?

Most Americans with eyelids that still lift would conclude that is exactly what's happening. America is being deliberately disintegrated by obvious treason from within.

Only thing is, it's not happening just to America; this nightmare formula is being implemented in every country in the world.

The same sick scenario is perhaps most visible in China, where thousands of people disappear at the same time, frustrated residents imprisoned in their own apartments leap from their high-rise windows to their terrifying deaths, and tens of thousands of betrayed Chinese take to the streets violently to protest the outright theft of their life savings by banks that suddenly close without warning.

It can't happen here, you say? By now you surely know it IS happening here.

Like repetitive shots of novocaine continuously jabbed into our brains, our ability to think has been slowly put permanently to sleep by events triggering terminal cases of cognitive dissonance that make us totally unable to act in our own best interests.

I'm talking about blacks burning down American cities and nobody arrested for the crimes versus patriots going to Washington to protest an obviously fixed election being thrown into solitary confinement and given long prison sentences by judges who conceal the political corruption that gave them their jobs in the first place.

I'm talking about young men taught to kill people they have never met for reasons they never understood returning home and being consumed by the images seared into their brains and choosing to kill themselves rather than continuing to endure the unbearable memory of what they've done.

I'm talking about large and loving families destroyed by the knowledge of what they believed which everyone they trusted told them that getting the jabs and all those booster shots was the right thing to do . . . as they bury their children.

This is all serious anesthesia, the exactly right formula for producing the zombie apocalypse.

It's tough to talk to the American people right now because they've been ordered to believe things that are not true as well as do things to themselves that will harm themselves and might even kill themselves. Like the Eloi ordered into the Morlocks' cave in H. G. Wells's The Time Machine — when the hypnotic horn sounded, they marched in a trance toward their own deaths, unable to resist the myths they have been taught to obey and free themselves from sure destruction they have been programmed to inflict upon themselves.

How about another booster shot?

Like trying to tell someone who has poisoned themselves with an inoculation they have been ordered to take has likely killed themselves, they resist the idea with all their might rather than admit they have made a mistake which is something their own ego will not allow them to face.

Think of it this way. You're in an airplane that is plummeting toward the ground whose engines have just failed and nobody's coming to fix them. You are very close to the final moments of your life so you should put your head between your legs, say a prayer and kiss your ass goodbye.

If you can think of a better idea now would be a propitious time to come up with it.

The plane will not crash, you tell yourself, and it's the last thought you ever have.

Even in death, we were afraid to ask when we knew our leaders were insane, why did we choose to follow them? Is this not the history of the human race that we are watching play out this very day?

How will you feel when you realize that you will never go home again and remember all the things you might have done that could have prevented all these things from happening?

Do you think there's still time to do anything about it? The alternative is to lay down and die, and judging by your actions, it looks like you've already made your choice.
