

White, liberal women driving “woke” culture rot in U.S.: Analysis

Description

A new analysis of who is driving the woke, left-wing cultural rot in America puts most of the blame on liberal white women who have come to appear to either have a guilt complex or have come to believe they have a greater role in shaping our society.

“Anyone who is perceptive of current social and political trends in America knows that women — especially White, liberal women — play an inordinate role. They are almost always at the forefront of any protest lecturing others about ‘systemic racism,’ ‘white privilege,’ ‘toxic masculinity,’ and the need for ‘equity’ in every sphere of life,” the analysis begins.

It goes on to note that the same women are provided with every platform possible so they can spew their culturally destructive rhetoric as they demand to be heard and more importantly, followed. Short of that — if they are not provided the exclusive domain they demand or if they are challenged by opponents in any way, they resort to shout-downs, violence and calls for canceling dissident voices.

Their attitudes appear to channel a quote from the late Harvard University Prof. Laurel Thatcher Ulrich, who wrote in 1976 that “well-behaved women seldom make history.” That’s not true, of course, but radical leftism in America actually began on the campuses of some of the country’s most prestigious institutions of higher learning and has since spread throughout the country like a cancer.

“This was apparently taken out of its context and given the new meaning that if women are to make an impact on society for good, they must rebel against the norm and be disruptive. The notion of a woman who is gracious and well-mannered as she protests is anathema to the thinking of most contemporary liberal female activists,” the analysis noted, adding:

All of this, of course, is not a recent phenomenon. It has its roots in the women’s suffrage movement beginning in the nineteenth century and increasing in influence ever since. The most notable modern feminists were Jews such as Betty Friedan, Naomi Klein, Gloria Steinem, and the late Supreme Court judge, Ruth Bader Ginsburg, can be named among them. ...

Feminist women have always created scenes for their cause. They have always engaged in public antics. They have always been vocal and confrontational. What we are witnessing today, then, is not necessarily new, but it is different in its degree and scope.

The analysis goes on to point out that modern “woke” feminists are self-righteous to a fault and obsessed with pleasing the virtue-signal gods. Worse, they have no concept of real ‘fairness’ and ‘equality,’ behaving as if only those they support should enjoy extra-constitutional rights, which is to say they blatantly sanction and approve of overt racism and inequality.

Arguing that a person of color or an LGBTQ person should be granted first dibs regarding college admissions, jobs and other endeavors is literally supporting discrimination, but white lib women don’t see it that way because they believe those views are the only ‘legitimate’ ones to have on the matter. Whenever conservative or even non-politically-affiliated Americans point that out to them, white lib women attack their critics with claims of “racism” and “bigotry.” It’s not ‘racist’ or ‘bigoted’ to read the Constitution’s equality clauses and take them at face value.

“Restraint and moderation aren’t permitted among today’s feminists. Like the most rabid religious fundamentalist, there is no reasoning with them. It is an all-or-nothing proposition,” the analysis notes.

“The new and hard-core feminists of today are not limited to a few cranks who are childless and have never been married. A good many of these women, instead, are married and have children. They are part of mainstream society. Other than the ‘pussy hats’ they might wear to some rallies, they wouldn’t necessarily stand out all that much from ‘normie’ women,” it adds.

White lib women are literally driving our country’s cultural and societal devolution.
